Asks for sanction to save the writer from retrenchment during the time he has halted in his journey at Madras and mentions his having had an assurance of leave being granted, shews how it is questionable whether report of return is to be made from the station of Chittoor or from Tellicherry, acknowledges that after quitting Mangalore he received at Bangalore a permission to return to Europe on furlough, also that after he reached Chittoor he received account of the relief granted him from part of the retrenchment against which he made appeal, shews how the great weight of the retrenchment and its arrival as soon after the citation in October induced him to write two papers from Tellicherry on the 25th. November 1830 the first to detail the reasons by which he was induced to seek the furlough and the second written to save the post of the day to apply for leave to return to Europe, that the most pressing reason was to obtain the alteration of a retrenchment	28th. COMPANY'S SERVANTS—cont. made by the Court of Directors, it being so serious in its effect as for the return pay of nearly one year of acting to absorb the savings in office during nearly two years of a permanent employ—shews how the charge of office appeared to afford an opportunity for such conduct. The charges which the Government has brought about and the consequences being the removal of those motives which had obliged the applicant himself to change his plans and argued to afford the opportunity of his being permitted to defer the use of the indulgence until after the rains in Malabar—Endeavours are made to shew how an usuage said to be either in some ordinance unknown to the writer or theory of the office of an applicant ceasing three months after he gave permission to use the indulgence being inapplicable to the peculiar circumstances of the writers case—Because the motives to force him home at an earlier period being of a public nature have been remedied by the Government in India and just now a remedy need not be sought at home also because he has been called and detained on services which have led him away from his home and place of embarkation and thence it has not become possible for him to embark in three months, on these and sundry reasons a return to Malabar and to office for a time necessary to make preparations to embark for Europe is asked, further that a return to Malabar to embark be permitted as the present fixed residence of the applicant still remains on that coast where he had lately been called—The necessity of a more formal certificate than has reached at Bangalore. The orders for the absentee allowance commencing from date of embarkation the proposition in his own paper of application for departure being deferred some months, reasons why the healthy applicant might be allowed without forfieture to quit India
